Grammar is the system and structure of a language. The rules of grammar help us decide the order in which we put the words and what form of a word to use. When you're talking about grammar, you're useful to know some basic terms. The following are called speech parts and everyone has their own function. Verbs verbs are often known as "making words". They can also show "having" or "being". For example: the horse jumped the fence. The pilot had a fall. The pilot is not injured. Names The names are the names of people, places, things and ideas. There are four types of noun. Common names - dogs, computers, river, collective biscuit names (names of a group of something) - a herd of cows, a flock of sheep names (the names of people, places and so on) - London, Anne . Blain English Abstract names of the countryside (names of things we can't see or touch) - Love, hope, fear, decision, poverty adjectives Adjectives describe the names. For example: she was wearing a blue dress. The small dog barked against me. A nice breeze bris ked it. Adverbs adverbs provides us more information on how, where or when a verb happens. For example: she led slowly. She spoke loudly. The article is well written. Pronouns pronouns are usually small words that are instead of a noun, often to avoid repeating the name. They include words like me, you, us, his, them, it. Preposition prepositions come before names or pronouns and usually show a connection. For example: your pen is on the desk. Children went to the park. We rested under the tree. Jim Hid behind the door. Connection conjunctions connect words, phrases or parts of a sentence together. The carpet is blue and cream. The road was busy. And it was noisy. I closed the door but I didn't block it because I thought it was still inside. Articles There are two types of article: defined and undefined. The defined item is "I". It is used to identify a specific thing. The indefinite article is "A" and "A". It is used to refer to something in general. For example: the cat sat on the carpet. (We know which cat and which carpet.) I need a ruler. (We don't need a specific ruler, nobody will do it.) The car should fight to raise a hill. (We can identify which machine, but refer to any hill.) Copyright Plain English Campaign has the copyright of this guide. You can save a copy of the disk driving and print a copy for personal use. You don't have to do more than one copy without our permission. When it comes to English-speaking skills, you should not pay close attention to grammar rules at the beginning. However, this does not mean that we should completely ignore English grammar. Needless says, the rules of basic English grammar play an important role in learning English, both written and pronounced. Without grammar rules, sometimes you can make you understand with short and simple expressions. However, it is possible to fail most of the time with more complicated expressions that require the correct orders or word structures. There are hundreds of grammatical rules, but the basics refer to the structure of the sentence and parts of the speech, including names, pronouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions. You will have a great foundation for reading and e If you can answer the question, "What are the basic English grammar rules?" Let's take a closer look at the sentences and parts of the speech and how to bind the rules of grammar. Marine creatures showing parts of grammar before we will immerse in English grammar bases, it is better to have an idea of the components within each rule. The base parts of the speech below are the building blocks of each phrase we write. Let's take a look at the most popular players of the game: a name appoint a person, animal, place, what, quality, idea, activity or feeling. A name can be singular, plural or possessive. For example: this book is full of intrigue and interest. Please illuminate the fire. I'd like some ice in my tea. A pronoun is a word that takes the place of a name, like "I", "You" or "them". For example: it's full of intrigue. Please illuminate the fire. I'd like some of them in my tea. A verb show action and can be a main verb (as a "race" or "sit") or a verb of help (as "were" or "ha"). The verbs also indicate thesis and sometimes they change their shape to show the past, present or future. You will also find the link verbs, linking the subject to the rest of the sentence (as "appearing" and "seem"). For example: Lexi and Mark crossed the Woods.Lexi walked through these first woods. Mark appears excited to start this new adventure. An adjective modification a name or a pronoun. Adjectives usually, even if not always, come before the name they are changing. Adds meaning by telling which or what type or describe it in other ways. For example: Lexi wore a pair of faded jeans. This black coffee has a disgusting flavor. Nothing beats a rainy morning.
